Check out Adobe's technical website for tips and tricks on how to use Photoshop. Before You Begin Download Photoshop for the PC by clicking on this link. Photoshop CS5 for Windows is a multilingual version of the program. Photoshop CS5 is usually free, but there are currently on-sale coupons available if you subscribe. Before you begin, there are some things that you should do to make sure that your photos are in good shape: Adjust White Balance If the colors of your images are to remain accurate and natural, it's imperative that you adjust the white balance settings of your camera before beginning to work with Photoshop. This step is recommended for both digital cameras and DSLRs. It also makes a significant difference to your images when you do develop them later on. If you don't adjust your images' white balance settings, the colors may shift in your photos and cause many of your edits to look unnatural. To make your images look more natural when you develop them later, either in Photoshop or your favorite editing program, increase the amount of warm light in the image and decrease the amount of cool light that is in the image. NOTE: If you shoot a lot of images with the same white balance settings on your camera, you can make all of your images look the same by saving all of your images as a group in the camera's memory and then adjusting the white balance in your camera and clicking on the "Paste as New" button in the camera's menu. Recompose Photos Often times, photos that were taken with the intention of one subject will turn out with a composition of other objects and people. Take the time to recompose the subject(s) in the image. Removing People or Objects from the Photo If you know that a photo contains people or objects that are either in the wrong position or not in the center of the frame, you can correct the problem by cropping the edges of the photo. A cropping tool is found on the flyout menu of the Photoshop toolbox. Many cameras provide a cropping function built-in. When you use the tool, you can select from a variety of different shapes to crop an image. TIP: If you select a shape that is too large, you will most likely lose some or all of your original image when you crop. If you select a smaller than ideal shape, you may lose some image data.

It's once again time for something new here at PSD Rumors!This week we've got something really special. Even though Photoshop is a professional grade software and Creative Suite are all paid applications it seems to be so under the radars that there's a lot of people who don't know what it is, how it works and where to get it.So our team has worked very hard this week to create a one-click installer with everything you need to get Photoshop. Yes, you read it right, a Photoshop installer that is one click away!Still needs to be improved for the future, but I'm confident that you'll like it.The install package will most likely be updated in the future, so don't worry if your version is different than mine.We've also created a few kickstarter posts to try to get more money for this, so I strongly encourage you to do one, too. I mean, it's not like the Photoshop developers are earning much money...XD Now, let's start with what Photoshop is.Photoshop is a very high-end software for both photographers and graphic designers. It is a very powerful graphics editing software that allows creating and editing images with ease.But here's the thing.Photoshop does not only come as a stand-alone app, but also in a huge collection of apps. This has the advantage of being able to add all the tools and features you need to work your projects without having to buy an expensive app or collection.It also happens to be the most popular app around. And it's not just about the developers, many people don't know that a lot of great photographers work with it because they know that noone can do their projects better than Photoshop.For the moment, we'll stick to the app itself, but let me know in the comments if you'd like to talk more about Photoshop as a whole.Now, let's talk about Photoshop Elements.Photoshop Elements is a graphics editor for photographers, graphic designers and hobbyists. It contains most of the features of the professional version but with fewer features and a simpler user

Q: URLConnection.getInputStream() returns 403 Forbidden? Trying to connect to a URL using URLConnection.getInputStream() and I get 403 error. I have to connect to one of my website's service using API called zelle. URL server = new URL(""); URLConnection conn = server.openConnection(); BufferedReader in = new BufferedReader(new InputStreamReader(conn.getInputStream())); I tried to access other website's API from zelle example but it works fine. Now if I use javax.net.ssl.HttpURLConnection I get another problem. It is working fine with https but when I use HTTP its return 403 Forbidden. I can't detect any difference between working and non-working URL (ie. why they have same URL). Can you give me a suggestion? A: The problem was the request is multipart. After changing some code I can access this site now. try { URL server = new URL(""); URLConnection conn = server.openConnection(); conn.setDoOutput(true); conn.setRequestProperty("Content-Type", "application/json"); PrintWriter out = new PrintWriter(new OutputStreamWriter(conn.getOutputStream())); out.print("{\"id\": 1, \"identity\": \"bkbp6280254uew\", \"type\": 1, \"user_id\": \"zd557d9c68\"}"); out.close(); BufferedReader in = new BufferedReader(new InputStreamReader(conn.getInputStream())); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } I think setDoOutput(true) is necessary for connecting to a site with multipart request. In this case it is not necessary. Thanks to @Kamil Blachowski for your suggestion.

The effect of sleep restriction on daytime sleepiness and perceived fatigue in athletes with suspected sleep apnea. To investigate the associations of habitual sleep duration and sleep fragmentation with fatigue and daytime sleepiness in the athlete with suspected sleep apnea. Prospective correlational design. Athletic training room. Ten high-level endurance athletes (4 male/6 female; mean age 24.4 +/- 5.6) participated in the study. Habitual sleep and wake times and subjective perception of fatigue and sleepiness were determined during a regularly scheduled daytime stay at a sleep disorders clinic. Sleep efficiency, AHI, % of AHI 10, % of total sleep time awake and subjective perception of the level of fatigue were measured. AHI 10 was present in five participants (41.7%). Sleep efficiency was 94.2 +/- 4.5%. The mean percentages of time spent awake were 3.2 +/- 5.9, 9.6 +/- 8.9, 37.1 +/- 27.4, and 56.4 +/- 19.4%, respectively, in each of the four quartiles of the sleep efficiency score. A significant correlation between sleep efficiency and subjective perception of fatigue was found ($r = 0.54$; $P = 0.04$). The degree of sleep fragmentation was significantly correlated with % of total sleep time spent awake ($r = 0.93$; $P = 0.02$). A significant association was found between habitual sleep duration and AHI > 10 ($r = -0.60$; $P = 0.03$). In the athlete with suspected sleep apnea, habitual sleep duration and sleep fragmentation are closely associated with daytime sleepiness and perceived fatigue. To better understand the underlying mechanisms, sleep studies are warranted. Selection of prime-boost vaccine candidates with incorporated HBV epitopes via nanolipoprotein particles.
